Egyptian communists indicted

CAIRO, June 1 (R). — Egypt's public prosecutor today demanded life imprisonment for 176 people accused of attempting to overthrow President Anwar Sadat's government during food price riots in January. The indictment by prosecutor Ibrahim Al Kalyoubi identified most of the accused as communists, according to the official Middle East News Agency (MENA). It said that 81 of them formed an illegal organisation known as the Egyptian Workers Communist Party with the aim of "changing the basic political, economic and social life in Egypt through illegal terrorist means." MENA said the prosecutor accused 38 more people of forming an "Egyptian Communist Party" aimed at toppling the Sadat govern-

If agreement is not reached on reactivation of the director general's efforts to implement the opera-tive parts of the 1974 resolu-tion condemning Israel, then the Arab states are likely to press ahead with efforts to ask this year's conference to reaffirm the 1974 resolution.
The Arab move is based on the belief that the full ILO conference, and not the director general's office alone, is responsible for deciding when efforts to implement the 1974 resolution should be called off. The Jordanian Labour Minis-

Underlying this point, the American delegate this morning referred to this year's meeting as "crucial" and "very important indeed".

BEIRUT, June 1 (R). — A Palestinian spokesman said today that about 1,000 Israeli troops crossed the border into Lebanon last night and stormed into the village of Kfar Shouba, se-arching houses for weapons. At the same time another Israeli contingent moved into the nearby Lebanese village of Hi-Ita and seized one inhabitant before withdrawing to Israeli territory, said the spokesman of the hard-line Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP).

Informed sources reported that reinforcements of battlehardened Palestinian commandos moved to Lebanon's explosive south today in the wake of the reported Israeli incursion.

The sources said positions held by Lebanon's leftist-Palestinian alliance in southern Lebanon were being reinforced in anticipation of another round of large-scale fighting for control of villages along the Israeli orted Israeli intrusion comes amid steadily-mounting tension in southern Lebanon where the civil war has persisted although fighting ended elsewhere in Lebanon last November. A Palestinian military spokesman in Beirut said strongholds of the leftist-Palestinian alliance had come under heavy artillery bombardment from rightwing positions and batteries inside Israel over the past 72 hours.

He added that a major target of the bambardment had been the town of Taybeh, captured from the rightists in a major leftist-Palestinian offensive last April.

A Palestinian military communique described the bombardment as "a dangerous development" and said it was linked to a largescale mobilisation of rightist forces along the Israeli border.

The flareup in the south followed a statement last week by the "Lebanese Front" of rightwing organisations that the presence of Palestinians in Lebanon was illegal and that the 1969 Cairo agreement regulating their presence was null and Falestin Al Thawra, official organ of the Palestine Liberation Organisation, described the statement as "a declaration of fascist war" and made clear that the commando movement would not bow to rightwing demands for the dispersal of Lebanon's Palestinians to other Arab countries.

A message of peace?

If press reports emanating from the United States and Israel are to be credited, such outstanding and traditional pro-Israeli members of Congress as Hubert Humphrey, Abraham Ribicoff, Jacob Javits and others have reached the point where they can no longer promise to support Israel's foreign policy as espoused by Likud bloc leader Menachem Begin.

According to the Israeli daily Haaretz, a message to this effect was formulated by Senator Humphrey and is to be handed to Mr. Begin by Senator Richard Stone, chairman of the Senate sub-committee on the Middle East, who is currently visiting the area.

Senator Stone is in fact reported to have sounded out leading congressmen on whether they thought the American Jewish community would support a Begin government policy that is bent on treating the West Bank as "liberated" Jewish territory. Seemingly the answer was no.

As though to highlight the seriousness of the problem, Israeli President Ephraim Katzir, whose office is largely ceremonial, and who hardly ever makes policy statements, departed from precedent last week to announce that peace with the Arabs will be the "prime and central concern" of any Israeli government. Earlier there had been an attempt by Mr. Yitzhak Rabin, head of the interim Labour -government, to prod Mr. Begin into adopting the traditional Labour Party line of presenting a dovish image while thinking up devilish excuses to blame Israel's own intransigence on the Arabs.

The question that comes to mind is precisely what is Mr. Begin being advised to do? Is it just a matter of a face-lift, of sounding less like a superhawk so that Jewish Americans and powerful congressmen can go on supporting Israel while it continues to dodge the responsibilities it must shoulder if peace is ever to come to the Middle East? Or is it more far reaching than that?

Mr. Begin's sudden, even brutal entrance on the world political scene has had a sobering effect on those who were hoping that relations between the U.S. and Israel could continue as before. It is evident that President Carter is quite serious in wanting to act as a sincere peace broker, and Mr. Begin's attempts to patronise him and ridicule his statements on the need for a Palestinian homeland have backfired. The American president is no mean adversary, and one ought to think twice before taking him on.

The Arabs and the rest of the world are tired of subterfuge and double talk. Those who have Israel's best interests at heart have a moral obligation to tell Mr. Begin and the other Likud leaders that an honest desire on the part of Israel to make peace is mandatory. It is time for the Likud bloc to reconcile itself to the fact that realistic concessions will have to be made for the sake of peace. Israel can no longer pass the buck. If that is Senator Stone's message, it is more than welcome by those who look forward to an end to the tragic impasse in the Middle East.

PRESS COMMENTARY

Jordan's newspapers were concerned mainly with peace efforts in the area and the strained relations between Israel and America.

Al Ra'i's editorial says that if an attempt is made to define the accomplishments achieved so far for peace in the area we find that only the "mood" for peace has been created. This mood has been fostered by international ef-forts and by Carter's statements and meetings with the different contestants.

But up till now peace efforts have only been "intentions" and there is a vast difference between "intentions" and "results". To achieve the latter a real desire for peace is re-

The paper moves on to men-tion that the Likud bloc's rise to power has added a new dimension to the Mideast problem which is the "time element". This is due to Likud's provocative policy of calling for the creation of more Israeli settlements on the West Bank. The problem of time has been referred to by Arab leaders and has been taken into account by both Presidents Carter and Valery d' Estaing, since Fahd. conferring with Prince

Al Sha'b's editorial entitled "A stand worthwhile to utilise" comments on how the Israeli press is worrying about Carter's recent statements in which he asks for Israeli commitment to the U.N. resolutions which he feels form the basis for a Mideast settlement. These statements were considered antagonistic by the Israeli press which is now demanding quick action to manipulate all efforts by Israeli supporters in the U.S. to stop what it sees as "deteriorating American-Israeli relations" by provoking American public opinion.

The paper sees no reason to blame Carter for his new stand, a stand which should have been taken up by previous American presidents.

Al Dustour stresses the importance of Jewish Americans in a peace settlement. The paper starts by saying that the crisis in American-Israeli rela-tions has taken on a new dimension at the diplomatic le-vel. This is due to Israel's strong objection to America in the light of Carter's recent statements asking Israel to abide by its commitments to U.N.

Israeli objections to the U.S. are very rare so this objection reflects the presence of the new hard-line in Israel.

Racist National Front gains ground in Britain

Politicians of all shades in Britain are becoming alarmed at the growing strength of the ultra rightwing National Front. Following successes in recent elections, Martin Webster, the party's National Activities Organiser, said the Front was now on its way to "becoming the third most important party in Britain". Forty years ago there were riots in London when Oswald Mosley's blackshirts clashed with the Jews. There could be similar troubles with the Feeder National Front of 1977 Fascist National Front of 1977.

By Nick Worrall

LONDON (Gemini) - The growing strength of the extreme rightwing, anti-immigrant, anti-semitic National Front in Britain is causing serious concern in many quarters.

Their candidates' successes in recent parliamentary by-elections, the Greater London Council (GLC) and the County Council elections, based as they were on racist campaigns, supports the view of many politicians that the front is a very serious threat to democracy.

The front actually beat the Liberal vote in 32 out of the 92 GLC constituencies. It polled altogether 119,063 votes (5 per cent of the total GLC poll), exceeding its own predicted total by more than 19,000. In one or two areas where the front is well established its vote was as high as 9 per cent of the total.

In the poorer districts of the capital -- mainly the deprived, inner urban areas -- the front did particularly well. But, surprisingly, in Southall, which has a large immigrant population, it only polled 1,872 votes, which seems to prove that the races are getting on together well enough in Southall and that they have no time for the racist policies of the front.

In the country council elections, the front beat the Liberals in Leicester in all but one of the wards, and in Wolverhampton it had a good increase in its vote.

Sir Reginald Goodwin, GLC Labour leader until Labour was defeated by the Conservatives, commented on the London results: "I regard the growing strength of the National Front as a very serious threat to democracy and to what is terribly important to London -- community relations."

Young Tories urged the Conservative leader, Mrs. Margaret Thatcher, to wage war on the National Front. They called on her to expose the front's "evil methods".

The extent of the revulsion felt in Britain at the front's activities can be gauged by a statement attributed to John Tyndale, leader of the party. He once said: "The Jew is like a poisonous maggot, feeding on a body in an advanced state of decay..." Hitler would have been proud of him.

Last summer a poster began to appear on London's underground trains, distributed by the front in response to the then Metropolitan Police Commissioner Sir Robert Mark's campaign for more non-white policemen in London.

"Be a police constable in Sir Robert Marx's police force," it read. Alongside the slogan was a picture of a gorrilla wearing a familiar London bobby's

This unashamedly racist propaganda has lent credence among confused voters, seeking alternatives to Tweedledum Labour and Tweedledee Conservative by newspaper reports of Asian families living in style on the welfare state.

There was a scandal last year when it was reported that one refugee family from Uganda was staying in £150 a week hotel accommodation, paid for by the local council.

Other reports have claimed that Asian and West Indian families have succeeded in being housed soon after their arrival in Britain despite long waiting lists.

With unemployment running at 13 per cent and more in London's East End and in other parts of Britain it is easy to see how the black face has become, in skilful propaganda hands, a scapegoat for the country's economic ills.

"Thanks to Tory-Labour-Liberal policies", said the National Front pre-election press statement, "immigrants from Afro-Asia are still pouring into London Inner London is now dangerous multi-racial slum.

"Muggings, violence, rapes and race riots... are a regular feature of London life... race laws grant "positive discrimination" in favour of blacks... all this is causing white people and industry to stampede out of London".

Under this umbrella of hatred and intolerance the National Front flelded 300 candidates in the local government largest concentrations were in the north where Bradford, Huddersfield and Leeds have immigration problems as do the cities of the West Midlands where the front have always secured sympathy.

In the recent Stechford, West Midlands, parliamentary by-election, where Labour lost former Home Secretary Roy Jenkins' seat to the Conservatives. the front polled nearly 3,000 votes, 8.2 per cent of the tota poll.

The Liberals only managed 2,900, almost half their 14.6 per cent at the last general election when the front did not fight Stechford.

"The National Front poses as a patriotic organisation", said Dr. Eric Ridge, London Liberals' deputy leader. "It is nothing of the kind. Like the Nazis the National Front is anti-black, anti-semitic anti-Liberal antiintellectual, anti-Labour, antifree trade, anti-church, antiparliament, anti-international, and anti-foreigner".

The truth of one or any of these claims seems to be of little consequence to the British voter. He is presently faced with very hard times indeed. Wages are being held down by a Labour government under international pressure, despite inflation at 16 per cent, and fuel and food prices are rising all

He thinks he sees immigrants getting a better deal. It isn't so, course, but the front likes to foster the thought. He thinks he sees immigrants getting a better deal. It isn't — Somalia's relations with the Soviet Union and neighbouring states, chiefly Ethiopia and Arab countries, are causing concern and some irritation to Somali leaders as the political manoeuvrings in the Horn of Africa become increasingly co-

For many years Mogadishu had privileged ties with Moscow in almost every field. Somalia was almost exclusively armed by Moscow -- in the same way that Ethiopia, until recently, received most of its weapons from the United States. Today relations are not quite what they were.

The primary factor causing concern to Somalia is the rapid rapprochement between Moscow and Addis Ababa following the Feb. 3 purge within the ruling Ethiopia Provisional Military Council (Derg).

Since then Soviet penetration in Ethiopia, part of Moscow's global strategy for Africa, has accelerated. Relations were cemented by the recent visit to Addis Ababa of Soviet head of state Nikolai Podgorny, coupled with the Kremlin's support for the Ethiopian revolution, In April Somalia's concern became clear. In what was considered a veiled warning to hasty positions.

But during a recent press conference for Western journalists Gen. Siad Barre dismissed spe-culation of a rift when he said he saw nothing which could prejudice relations between Mogadishu and Moscow.

But for the first time he said that the deliveries of Soviet arms -- chiefly T-34 and T-54 tanks -- to Ethiopia was a source of concern and repercussions were probable. For many observers Somalia has good reason to worry about Soviet penetration Ethiopia. Addis Ababa is, for Mogadishu, the enemy and the two countries have a double territorial dispute. Somalia claims the Ethiopian province of Ogaden and each country accuses the other of territorial claims on Djibouti (French territory of Afars and Issas) scheduled to become independent this month. Thus the entry of the Soviet Union, a long-time ally, into the Addis Ababa camp has caused some confusion here on what line to take with Mos-

War--in the spirit of the times

By Gwynne Dyer

The Humanitarian Laws of War" has an antique and faintly ironic ring to it, like "Eti-quette for Muggers" or "The Gentleman's Guide to Rape." Ever since 1974, however, over a hundred nations have been meeting in Geneva to modernise those laws in line with the gentle customs of our own time.

Every right-thinking citizen would agree that it is legal, right and altogether praise-worthy for men to kill and maim people they have never even met, provided that it is done in the name of politics and not mere private enterprise. Every sovereign government on earth and a great many free-lance political organisations claim the sacred right to make war on those they disagree with, and who are we to question their wisdom?

Drawing up rules for the conduct of war cannot be a pleasant duty for the International Commission of the Red Cross (ICRC), whose members are dedicated to the alleviation of human suffering. On balance, however, we have to be glad that there is someone to do it.

There has been some sort of internationally agreed code for warfare for almost a century, and for the past 50 years the Swiss-run ICRC has taken the lead in efforts to expand its coverage. On the whole, however, the rules are still at the stage, as one Swiss diplomat put it, "of outlawing dum-dum bullets and the dropping of ex-plosives from balloons." So five years ago the ICRC drafted two new protocols totalling 140

The new rules have been debated at length in Geneva over now all but agreed. In a plenary session on 10 June they will be put to the vote, and those getting a two-thirds majority will become international law (though apparently any country will be able to opt out of any that it doesn't like).

The most important new rules deal with guerrillas, who are to be granted almost all the rights and protections of regular combatants. In some cases they will actually come under the rules for international war, and the rest are to be covered by a whole new protocol setting out rules for non-international con-Guerrillas fighting "against colonial domination and racist regimes in the exercise of the right of self-determination" will henceforward be regarded as fighting an international war. If captured, they are to be treated as regular prisoners war. They have to be recognised by the "relevant regional authority", though, so pends on how their neighbours feel about them. Thus the Palestine Liberation Organisation's activities will be treated as international war (because it is recognised by the Arab League), but those of George Habbash's breakaway Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine will not. Guer-rillas in Rhodesia/Zimbabwe, South West Africa/Namibia and South Africa will get recogni-tion as regular combatants, but guerrillas fighting in Eritrea and Western Sahara will not, since the Organisation for African Unity is hopelessly divided about those issues.

All the other guerrilla who do not get this recognition would nevertheless benefit from the protocol, sponsored by African countries and Vietnam. It simply extends combatant and prisoner-of-war status to all guerrillas who carry arms openly during an actual attack. In essence, if you put a bomb on an airplane you are a ter-

the most controversial article of rorist, but if you hijack it with a pistol (provided you have a political motive) then you are a soldier. And even if guerrillas lose the right to prisonerof-war status by failing to display arms openly, they will be "given protections equivalent in all respects to those accorded prisoners of war."

Some people see this as a way of curbing excesses. If guerrillas are given combatant status, which theoretically makes them immune to torture or summary execution, then perhaps they also will obey the rules, including the conventions which define civilians as noncombatants. It seems a distinctly slender hope, but 65 countries including the United States and the Soviet Union supported this article in April, while only Israel and Brazil actually voted against it.

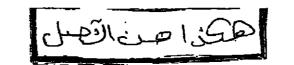

Totalitarian countries would have little trouble in getting round this rule. Captured guerrillas can easily be "shot while attempting to escape," or simply made to disappear. But in countries operating under the rule of law, things would be different: In Britain the IRA could claim they were prisoners of war, and even Patty Hearst could perhaps have demanded that status in the United States.

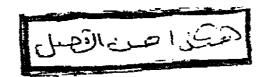

cipants in Geneva abstained or staved away when this article was voted, so it can still be defeated at the plenary session

Unrest batters Pakistani economy ISLAMABAD, June 1 (R). — Strikes and political unrest in Pakistan in the last three months cost the economy between $400 and $500 million. Federal Finance Minister Abdul Hafeez Pirzada said Tues-This was the effect on Gross National Product (GNP) of 60 production days lost mainly because of opposition-inspired strikes and the imposition of martial law in three of the biggest cities.

Mr. Pirzada, painting a grim picture of Pakistan's economy, said in an interview with the official Associated Press of Pakistan News Agency that the country was in for a hard year. Observers interpreted this as foreshadowing a tough 1977-78 budget, which is due to be in-troduced in Parliament about the middle of June.

They said the minister was obviously aiming to underline the bleak economic situation in advance of talks starting next Friday between the government and the opposition to resolve the I2-week-long political crisis over disputed general elections.

Mr. Pirzada's estimate of losses resulting from opposition agitation against the government was considerably lower than Federal Communications Minister Mr. Mumtaz Ali Bhutto, who put the overall figure at more than $1 billion.

Mr. Pirzada said the failure of the last cotton crop had reduced the GNP by a further $500 million.

He said cotton production had dropped dramatically from around four million bales to about 2.1 million bales in the last two years because of a change in the climatic cycle. This had seriously curtailed exports of textiles, yarn and raw cotton, affecting the overall economy and retarding the

The minister said Pakistan's export earnings in the 1976-77 financial year would amount to about $1,050 million compared with a target of $1,400 million.

On a brighter note, Mr. Pirzada predicted this year's wheat crop would be more than nine million tons -- which experts say would be above the level of self-sufficiency.

ECONOMIC NEWS BRIEFS

* WASHINGTON, June 1 (AFP). - President Jimmy Carter's energy programme will not reach its goals, even if it is approved intact by Congress, the congressional Budget Office asserted yesterday. The study says the administration's energy objectives are too ambitious, both with respect to economies in energy use that could be made and to possibilities of applying alternative energy sources. The document adds that the Carter plan could cut U.S. oil imports by 3.6 million barrels a day -- not by the 4.5 million expected by the president. It also says that it is unrealistic to think that gasoline consumption can be cut by 10 per cent by 1985, as the White House wants. The maximum reduction would be five per cent, it estimates.

* LONDON, June 1 (AFP). - Britain will run into another economic crisis of 1974-75 proportions if there is no third year's "social contract" carbing wages, the National Economic and Social Research Institute said today. If the social contract ends, the average rise in wages during the 1977-78 fiscal year could be 20 per cent, implying that inflation would stay the same at the start of 1979. But if a third year's social contract kept the wage increase down to 10 per cent, inflation would fall to seven per cent, the jobless figure would be steady while the Gross National Product (GNP) and domestic consumption would rise moderately.

* NEW DELHI, June I (R). - India's leading businesses decided to freeze prices of their products for six months to help the new government of Prime Minister Morarii Desai curb rising prices. Representatives of 20 top companies in Bombay announced their decision at a press conference yesterday. They said they adopted a resolution not to increase prices until December 31 "except in the case of loss-making units."

* LONDON, June 1 (AFP). — Chrysler-United Kingdom suffered another blow Tuesday following reports that Iran had decided to cut orders for Paykan motor-car components assembled in that country. Instead of importing the 130,000 engines previously ordered from the Chrysler factory at Stoke, near Coventry, Iran now considers that only about 100,000 will be needed. The ailing Chrysier Company had agreed to supply the Paykan assembly line until 1980. After that date, the company will maintain a special relationship which should ensure work for its Coventry workers.

* BRUSSELS, June 1 (AFP). - The European Economic Community (EEC) Commission today forecast that the community's inflation for calendar year 1977 would not exceed 10 per cent. It believed the EEC was ending a period of substantial price rises and that the trend would become moderate.

Saudi Arabia still undecided on oil price

PARIS, June 1 (R., — Saudi Arabia has still not decided what action to take on oil price increases, its Oil Minister Shelkh Ahmad Zaki Yamani said here yesterday.

Reporters asked him what Saudi Arabia planned to do if other members of the Orga-nisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) stick to their announced decision to increase oil prices by a further five per cent in July.

"We still have not taken a "We still have not taken a decision," he replied.

The majority of OPEC countries increased their oil prices by 10 per cent at the beginning of this year, but Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates refused to follow their example. Their prices went up by only five per cent.

Sheikh Yamani was answering questions after a hunch gi-

The French presidential spokesman said the energy issue was raised but declined to make any further comment.

Sheikh Yamani, in answer to a question said that Saudi Arabia is opposed to a propo-sal that an international ener-

He declined to say what al-

Some players are by nature devious. They will often reject a legitimate chance in favor of pulling off a swindle. That's the way they derive pleasure from the game, and all too often they find someone who will help them along.

The auction was straightforward. With a fair sixcard suit and a possible outside entry, we approve of North's decision to raise to three no trump. West led his fourth-best heart and South could count eight tricks. Any reasonable declarer would run six diamond tricks in the hope of embarrassing the defenders. then try for either an endplay or the club finesse, depending on how the opponents had discarded. That line would have succeeded here if declarer reads the position, for West is forced to unguard his king of clubs, or let go of his spades on the subjects him to an endplay.

But South was one of those declarers whose minds just won't go along a straight and narrow path. He rejected the simple line in favor of a "swindle." He cashed the ace and king of diamonds. on which West followed with the four and seven and East discarded a spade. Next, declarer led the queen of spades from his hand. He was trying to give the impression that he held the aceking of diamonds bare, and that he was trying to force an entry to dummy with the king of spades.

East swallowed the bait. He ducked the spade, declarer smiled his thank you and ran for home with nine compelling reason for East to suspect that trickery was afoot. Had West started with four diamonds, his correct play to the two diamond tricks would have been first the seven and then the four! By starting with a low diamond, he was showing an odd number of diamonds.

Therefore, declarer had to have another diamond as an entry to dummy, and the lead of the queen of spades deluge of diamonds, which was a blatant attempt to steal a trick.

False hopes dashed in Dutch train drama

GLIMMEN, Holland, June 1 (Agencies) — Hopes that Sou-th Moluccan gunmen who hijacked a train in northern Holland were about to release at least one of their 55 hostages were dashed today in an angry exchange between the guerrillas and a government psychiatrist.

The incident brought a fresh touch of menace to a situation in which the government, trying to wear down the guerrillas into a state of submission, had appeared to be getting the up-per hand, psychologically, over their trigger-happy adversaries.

It began when the guerrillas called for an ambulance to be sent to the twin-coach, yellow train in which they and their hostages are jammed in appal-ling conditions. They promised to call back the authorities with further instructions about 10 minutes later over the makeshift "hotline" which has been set up with the train.

But it was an hour-and-a-half before they finally put one of their hostages, a 23-year-old

SAN'A, June 1 (R). -- North Yemen has proposed that an Arab summit conference be convened urgently to discuss "dangers threatening the Arab World," Foreign Minister Abdullah Al Asnag told reporters.

The proposal had been submitted by the North Yemeni representative to the Arab League after the government had con-tacted other Arab governments.

The foreign minister did not spell out the exact dangers, but well-informed sources in Amman thought the questions likely to top the agenda of the proposed summit were Red Sea security and the Middle East situation since the rightwing Likud bloc's victory in Israel's general election a fortnight ago.

Mr. Al Asnag said North Ye-meni President Ibrahim Al Hamdi had urged the Arab League Secretary General, Mr. Mahmoud Riad, to take the necessary arrangements for convening the Arab summit.

Soviet strategy in Africa is a rategy in Africa and the Middle East has "failed totally" as a result of false information fairs, Sudan's President Jaafar Nimelri said in an interview published here today.

Ethiopian forces could not move one inch inside "liberated" areas of the Eritrean Province, Gen Nimeiri said. "The only role for Mengistu's tro-ops is to protect his regime," the Sudanese leader said.

If Ethiopia went to war with Somalia, President Nimeiri said, Sudan would "naturally" ally itself with Somalia which would win in the end. And if the flow of Soviet weaponry into Eritrea continued, Somalia would probably feel obliged to take action to protect itself, the Sudanese le-ader added.

In a separate development, President Nimeiri has expres-sed satisfaction about Zaire's "final victory" over "treache-rous powers" behind the inva-sion of the country's Shaba Province, in a cable to President Mobutu Sese Seko published in Khartoum today.

Gen. Nimeiri said the Zairese victory was due to President Mobutu's determination and effort and "the devotion of his armed forces" plus the aid and support of "peace-loving com-tries". The invaders wanted to impose their domination on the African continent, President Nimelri said.
